Work Assignments

Associates at Rogers & Hardin learn the most about becoming competent and successful lawyers through hands-on, day-to-day work assignments. Based upon prior experience and an associate's educational and professional background, associates may be initially assigned to work with a particular client team or within a specific practice area; however, traditionally associates will spend the early part of their careers working with multiple teams to fully develop their expertise and become diverse in this practice area. Work will flow naturally within the team or from partners or other associates. Associates are also encouraged to seek out projects that will broaden their experiences and will provide the chance to work with a variety of lawyers.
